Strange but True

Have you ever read a story in a newspaper which you can't believe? These newspaper stories, believe it or not, are all true.

A

Seven shops in the town of Melton Mowbray have given a job to Mr Jack Beaver. His job? Every day he goes to each shop after they close and jumps up and down on the rubbish in their dustbins. "I've never had such an easy job," said Mr Beaver. "After I've done it just a few times, they can put twice as much rubbish in the next day!" Mr Beaver weighs 120 kilos.

B

Mr Fred Diplock of Neasden, North London, is trying to sell his house. He hasn't had any luck yet. "The garage has been the problem," said Mr Diplock yesterday. "I built it myself last year, but I made a small mistake. The garage is higher than the drive. You can get into the garage of course — I've built four steps up into it. Quite a lot of people have already come to see the house. But nobody has bought it yet. I've told them that the garage is a very extra bedroom. But it's useless for a car, I'm afraid!"

C

Mrs Jane Wisty of Downend, Bristol, rang the police yesterday. "I've just seen a dead body!" she told them. "It was in the boot of a car. The boot was open and I could see two legs hanging out." The police contacted all the police cars in the area. "We've just had a report of a car with a dead body in it," one police car reported. "We've seen it too. We're following it now." A few minutes later the police stopped the car. The "dead body" got out of the boot. It was a car mechanic. The driver of the car explained. "I've had a funny noise from the back of my car for a long time. The mechanic just wanted to find out where it came from." The police have decided not to arrest the driver or the mechanic.
